	The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco
1	SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26, 2023, 1:30 PM
2	-000-
3	(Call to order of the Court.)
4	THE CLERK: Calling the matter of the Roman Catholic
5	Archbishop of San Francisco.
6	And counsel's in the courtroom, Your Honor.
7	THE COURT: Appearances, please. Good afternoon.
8	MR. PASCUZZI: Good afternoon, Your Honor. Paul
9	Pascuzzi, Felderstein Fitzgerald Willoughby Pascuzzi & Rios,
10	for the debtor, the Roman Catholic Archbishop of San Francisco,
11	a corporation sole.
12	And if I might, Your Honor, for the record, we have a
13	couple of client representatives also on the Zoom, not that
14	they need to be on the screen, but Abp. Cordileone, Fr.
15	Summerhays, Mr. Passarello, Mr. Gaspari, who is our special
16	litigation counsel, and Wayne Weitz from B. Riley, who/s the
17	financial adviser.
18	THE COURT: All right. Well, I'm sorry. I can't see
19	you all or you can't see me, but I can blame Xfinity on that
20	for my neighborhood internet. But good afternoon, everyone.
21	And also appearing for the committee, Mr. Lucas, are
22	you there, or someone for the committee?
23	MR. LUCAS: Yes, Your Honor. John Lucas, Pachulski
24	Stang Ziehl & Jones, counsel to the committee.
25	THE COURT: Mr. Pascuzzi, I'm not sure I know what's

The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco 1 left active on the docket for this afternoon, so I'll sort of 2 let you tell me what's left. 3 MR. PASCUZZI: Yeah. And Your Honor, Mr. Katz from 4 Sheppard, Mullin is also on the screen, and I think Mr. 5 Blumberg from the U.S. Trustee, if they needed to make their 6 appearances. 7 THE COURT: Okay. I'm sorry. I quess I thought I 8 noted Mr. Katz. 9 Mr. Katz, are you there? 10 MR. KATZ: I am, Your Honor. Ori Katz, Sheppard, 11 Mullin, Richter & Hampton, for the debtor. 12 THE COURT: And Mr. Blumberg. 13 MR. BLUMBERG: Good afternoon, Your Honor. 14 Blumberg for the United States Trustee. 15 THE COURT: Okay. Back to you, Mr. Pascuzzi. 16 MR. PASCUZZI: Okay. Thank you, Your Honor. We have 17 two continued first day motions on calendar. One is the wage 18 The other is the cash management motion. And then a motion. 19 motion that was subsequently filed is a motion to extend the 20 time to remove actions.

And I believe as to the wage motion, Mr. Lucas for the committee filed a response. I don't think it's an opposition or an objection. In fact, it said it's not an objection.

As to the cash management motion, the U.S. Trustee has an objection as to the investment accounts that we have not

23

24

25

The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco been able to resolve.

And as to the removal extension deadline motion, there's been no responses or opposition.

THE COURT: Okay. Well, everything you said is consistent with what I had gleaned from the docket.

So taking it in reverse order, I've reviewed the extension motion, and it seems in order to me. So without opposition, I will grant it and as requested.

And as to the wage motion, I sort of also had the same observation that the committee stated its position, but not as a formal objection. And I'd like to just leave it unacted upon because there's nothing for me to act upon. But I'm aware of the committee's point of view. And I'm prepared to approve on a final basis the wage motion, if that's acceptable to counsel.

MR. LUCAS: Your Honor, that's --

THE COURT: Mr. Lucas, do you have a statement on that? Anything? I mean, is there any reason why I shouldn't just put that last vestige of that first day motion to bed and say, fine, it's final?

MR. LUCAS: Your Honor, this is John Lucas. No, there is not. As we said in our response, there's information that the committee would like, and we will go through the proper mechanism, if you will, to get that information. Thank you. Yeah.

THE COURT: Okay. Okay. I mean, I'd rather just

The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco
leave it at that. I'm not going to express any personal views on it because it's not an action item.

So Mr. Pascuzzi, given Mr. Lucas's statement, I guess before I conclude that subject, I should say, is there anyone on the call that wishes to be heard on the debtor's what we call the wage motion and any of the aspects of it?

Okay. Hearing none, Mr. Pascuzzi, I'll put it to bed by saying it's allowed or granted as explained on the record and ask you to go ahead and upload the order; does that work for you?

MR. PASCUZZI: Yes, Your Honor. I will do that.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. PASCUZZI: And Mr. Katz is going to handle the cash management motion, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. All right. And on that subject,
Mr. Katz, before you elaborate, I thought I got the impression that the U.S. Trustee had expressed a view, but I didn't understand it was still up for a decision. So go ahead and take it from there.

MR. KATZ: Thank you, Your Honor. Ori Katz for the debtor. And I'll start with a little bit of background. Help get everyone up to speed.

But there's only a narrow issue under this motion that remains unresolved, Your Honor. It just has to do with the application of Section 345(b) to the investment accounts. And

The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco what happened, Your Honor, is we had been meeting and conferring with the U.S. Trustee. We did have a series of agreed continuances, and part of that was to allow the parties to discuss and exchange information. Part of it was to allow the committee to be appointed and either take a position or not.

Ultimately, Your Honor, as to the United States

Trustee, following a really good-faith effort and a series of meeting and conferral over an extended period of time, we weren't able to reach a resolution on that specific part of the motion. We do have agreement on a proposed form of order that covers everything else that's not at issue.

And as to the committee, I believe they may chime in, but I don't want to speak for them other than to say that we met and conferred with the committee, which was one of the reasons for the continuance. We provided them quite a bit of info. We made available to them our financial advisor and connected B. Riley with their financial advisor.

But the bottom line is, Your Honor, I think we could use some guidance from the Court to resolve this narrow, open issue, and I'm happy to proceed any way the Court would like.

I could jump in with my views, answer questions, or really take my cues from Your Honor.

THE COURT: Well, just narrow-in and pinpoint the issue, and then I'll ask Mr. Blumberg to tell me the

The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco alternative. I mean, again, I think I probably knew it and read it and know it, but I'd like to hear it as it presently has been resolved and narrowed-down to.

MR. KATZ: Yeah. I think the issue, Your Honor, is whether cause exists under 345(b) to provide for a waiver of strict compliance with that provision of the Code, which would otherwise require liquidation of about 160 million dollars of various investments, some of which are completely illiquid and are locked up, and placing the net proceeds of that liquidation in a depository in strict compliance with the U.S. Trustee guidelines. And so it comes down to whether we've shown cause for a waiver. I think that's the issue. And the debtor believes we have and --

THE COURT: Okay. Can you --

MR. KATZ: Yeah. Sorry, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Can you break it down into -- again, pardon me for not being able -- I mean, I can look at the prior motion, but where are those? Those are in two different existing accounts that are not authorized depositories; isn't that the case?

MR. KATZ: That's correct, Your Honor. Well, these are custodial/brokerage accounts, and one of them is with U.S. Bank. That's what we refer to in the papers as the pooled account. And the other is with Bank of America Securities, which is our -- which is invested with a BlackRock Federal Fund

The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco

ETF, essentially. And so those aren't authorized depositories.

They're affiliated with authorized depositories. Both U.S. Bank and Bank of America are authorized depositories. But they're not held in strict compliance with the U.S. Trustee guidelines, which would require some sort of collateral or backstop against the amounts held.

THE COURT: Right. Right. So if either of those two institutions failed, there's only a limitation on the insured amount, which is minimal by comparison, right?

MR. KATZ: Relative the amounts held, yes, Your Honor, but I'm not sure that even -- well, I'm not sure how likely a failure is at that level of entities that are rated this highly. But setting that aside, even if either failed, because of the nature of the investments, I'm not certain that that's a complete loss automatically, whether those would automatically be swept into a bankruptcy, for example, and lost. I think it's a complex analysis, so I'm not sure the risk is quite that high.

THE COURT: No, I understand. Listen, it's not like I -- no, I understand.

But let me ask Mr. Blumberg, as a practical solution, what would you want me to order? I mean, Mr. Katz has now stated the issue.

MR. LUCAS: Your Honor, this is John Lucas.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. LUCAS: And I apologize for butting in, but would it be more appropriate if I said a few words on behalf of the committee first before Mr. Blumberg went? Because I think that we're more on the same page with debtor's counsel here as opposed to the United States Trustee.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. LUCAS: I'm happy to proceed however you want, though.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. LUCAS: I just didn't want to mess up the flow. I apologize.

12 THE COURT: Go ahead, Mr. Lucas. Go ahead and make your statement.

MR. LUCAS: Thank you. Thank you, Your Honor. John Lucas, Pachulski Stang, for the committee.

Your Honor, the committee didn't file anything formal in response to the motion, the objection, or the reply that was filed recently. But the committee sort of sighs here because our view here is that the debtor isn't trying to cut corners or to, I think, kind of compromise anything, but the debtor is actually trying to preserve things. And if you look at the reply, Your Honor, there are two buckets of investments.

There's the Bank of America stuff, which is invested through BlackRock, but it's approximately fifty-four million dollars in United States Treasuries. And we think that is

The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco an important point. If they had to divest that and put it into an approved depository, the estate is already losing about 34, 35,000 dollars a month in interest that it would otherwise receive. So that's one point, Your Honor.

And then the other point, Your Honor, which the committee has discussed with the debtor's counsel and the financial advisers, is that there is a huge, huge chunk of money, investments in the U.S. Bank account through those various investment vehicles that are subject to restrictions, and that it's as if the debtor is going to be asked to just walk away from the money or experience severe penalties for a requirement that's under the Bankruptcy Code, but it's not a requirement that is always enforced. And we think that the facts here support looking past that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Well, I'm looking at the reply here, or excuse me -- yeah, the reply, which is doc 87. Is there a later -- is it this -- there's a later supplemental from Mr. Passarello. Does that give me more specifics on that, help me on that? I did look at these things quite some time ago, and that gets back to my point about I'm not sure what's still liable. So --

MR. LUCAS: Your Honor, there --

THE COURT: -- Mr. Lucas, what were you -- what were you were you referring to when you referred to the fifty-four million, for example, and the penalties?

The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco

MR. LUCAS: So Your Honor, I am using Mr. Katz' pleading that he filed the other day as my sort of step stool to provide some of the factual information that the debtors put in. And so perhaps I could turn it over to Mr. Katz, and I could let him sort of set the table a little bit better. But as Your Honor can probably tell, I've discussed this with Mr.

Katz and that we don't want the estate to be harmed here by a formalistic requirement of Bankruptcy Code. But I'll let Mr.

Katz sort of set the table a little bit better. I'm sorry I qot out a little bit ahead.

MR. KATZ: Your Honor, this --

THE COURT: Well, but before we do that, I'm going to take your comment, Mr. Lucas, and let Mr. Blumberg be heard.

This is not -- I can't turn this into a roundtable discussion.

Mr. Blumberg, would you help me understand what you propose as a practical alternative to what the debtor and the committee wants?

MR. BLUMBERG: Yes, Your Honor. Thank you. Jason Blumberg for the United States Trustee. I'll get right down to the kind of the brass tacks.

There are essentially two accounts here. There's the Bank of America Securities account, and then there's the pooled investment accounts at U.S. Bank. The Bank of America account has about 57.6 million, and the U.S. Bank account has approximately 100 million in various pooled investment funds.

Case: 23-30564 Doc# 341 Filed: 11/24/23 Engrey 11/24/23 08:12:35 Page 13 of

The Bank of America account is the one that gives us -- well, let me take a step back. The Bank of America account is a liquid account. There would be no tax consequences to liquidating it. And we think that that account should be liquidated and moved over to a debtor-in-possession account that's collateralized as required by Section 345(b) of the Bankruptcy Code. That would protect estate state funds as Congress envisioned.

I understand the argument that Mr. Lucas alluded to, that the fund that the debtor invests in has interests in cash and treasury bills. But with respect, the debtor doesn't have a direct interest in those funds. It has an interest in the black market money market mutual fund, and it holds that interest through Bank of America Securities. So there is a level of institutional risk that exists here. There's perhaps two levels of institutional risk.

Coming back to the supplemental reply, in connection with the costs of liquidating these accounts, the debtor indicated on -- well, anyway, the debtor indicated that a cost of ten million dollars to liquidate these accounts would impede the debtor's reorganization. So a ten-million-dollar cost would impede the debtor's reorganization. A loss of 60 or 160 million would surely do so the same. So we do think the Bank of America Securities account should be liquidated and moved over to a debtor-in-possession account.

Now, with respect to the U.S. Bank pooled investment accounts, it's a trickier issue because as the supplemental reply lays out, there are costs and liquidity issues associated with those accounts. That said, as I understood the supplemental reply, I think I believe six of the accounts were liquid. Four private funds were of such that they could be liquidated on a quarterly basis. And then four real estate funds really could not be liquidated without incurring substantial costs.

So going back through those, it's our position that the six funds that are liquid, those should be liquidated and move over into a debtor-in-possession account so that the funds are protected and collateralized, as Congress envisioned.

With respect to the private funds that can be liquidated on a quarterly basis, the United States Trustee's position is that when that quarterly opportunity or window arises, then the debtor should avail itself of that opportunity and move the proceeds over into a debtor-in-possession account.

And then finally, with respect to the real estate funds, we understand the debtor's point. There would be significant costs. There are liquidity issues. We would request that the debtor be required to liquidate those real estate funds only in accordance with the contractual parameters so that it doesn't incur the cost that it's worried about.

That's what we would propose. We think that is a

The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco reasonable solution that enables the debtor to avoid the costs that it's worried about but at the same time respect Congress's decision in Section 345(b) that estate funds should be protected from the risk of loss by the financial institution.

THE COURT: But just to clarify, Congress didn't manditate it, right, or mandated it in the sense that courts have no discretion and debtors have some discretion and the courts have some discretion. Right. It's not as -- and I don't violate the law if I allow a waiver of the 345(b) requirement, right?

MR. BLUMBERG: That's correct, Your Honor. You can waive the requirement --

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. BLUMBERG: -- for cause. We think that's a -- we think it's not a strong argument on the debtor's side with respect to the Bank of America Securities account. We think they have a stronger argument we can see with respect to the pooled investment accounts. But we think what we're proposing respects what the debtor is trying to do.

THE COURT: Well, what I'm trying to do is keep up with everybody on the information. So I'm looking, and I want to make sure I haven't missed something. So I have in-hand Mr. Passarello's original declaration, which is document 14, filed way back on August 21st. And then I have the debtor's reply, which is document 87. And I have a second supplemental

The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco declaration of Mr. Passarello, document 87-1.

Now, I wonder if I'm at least misplacing a declaration of Mr. Passarello that isn't numbered. Oh, no, here it is. I just found it, the supplemental declaration, which is document 184.

All right. And so the three Passarello documents and declarations, rather, are the three operative documents, right, Mr. Blumberg, or --

MR. BLUMBERG: Your Honor, I believe --

THE COURT: -- (indiscernible) something.

MR. BLUMBERG: Your Honor, this is Jason Blumberg for the United States Trustee. There was a supplemental reply filed by the debtor on Friday at docket number 232. And I believe there is a declaration of Mr. Passarello attached to that filing and --

THE COURT: That was just filed just -- that was just last Friday?

MR. BLUMBERG: Yes, Your Honor. And Mr. Passarello's declaration, I believe, is 232-1.

THE COURT: Yes. Okay. I do see that. I think I have a feeling that that's something that I didn't catch up with. If it was filed on Friday, I was pretty much out of pocket for a couple of days. And when I looked at the document, or the docket, excuse me, I may have missed it or something. I don't know.

So I take it that the document that was filed on Friday has some of the more specifics that you're focusing on; is that a correct statement?

MR. BLUMBERG: That's correct, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. So I owe it to both sides here to be a little more informed. And I will confess that having thought I've reviewed everything, I missed that document. But what I -- so therefore, Mr. Blumberg, I'm going to ask that you again tell me a little bit more.

If I were to order the debtor to do what you're suggesting, particularly with the B of A amount, and you say, well, you want it in a collateralized DIP account, what does that translate to in terms of where that money ends up in terms of the impact? In other words, let me say that more precisely. If I magically could move all that money to where you think it should be moved today, what would be the impact in terms of the earning capacity that those funds would make, compared to what they make now?

Leave aside risk. So that to state it more specifically, that fifty-seven million is sitting where it's sitting now, and it's producing a certain return on that investment. And if we to go with your suggestion, it would be somewhere else. And what would be the return or the comparison of that return with what happens if I don't make it move? Understand my question?

25 Understand my question?

Case: 23-30564 Doc# 341

MR. BLUMBERG: I do, Your Honor. So I'm going off the supplemental reply at pages 8 through 10. That's docket number 232.

And according to that document, the debtor states that it's earning 5.23 percent where the funds are invested now. It states that it would earn 4.5 percent if it had to move the funds to a debtor-in-possession account. And then the debtor estimates that the cost or the spread would result in a cost of 36,000 dollars a month. That's not insignificant, but I would argue that it's fairly modest when compared to an investment of fifty-seven million dollars, especially when the debtor intends to move out of this bankruptcy case quickly and expeditiously.

I would also note that one of the cases that we cited in our original objection, or rather actual objection, is the Ditech case, 605 B.R. 10, out of the Southern District of New York. And that case, the bankruptcy court ordered the debtor to comply with Section 345(b), even though the cost of doing so would have been 80,000 dollars a month. So there is precedent, not binding precedent for sure, but precedent for the Court requiring compliance with Section 345(b), even if it would — even if it would result in additional costs or reduced earning capacity.

THE COURT: Okay. And again, I repeat one more time, I need to study more carefully the document that I've admitted that I haven't studied. So I'm trying to do a quick study on

The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco and listen to what you're saying.

So Mr. Blumberg, what you're telling me in sort of simple, simple terms is if the debtor moves this fifty-seven million dollars, it'll go negative by 36,000 dollars a month, but it will have protected much more safely, you believe, the fifty-seven million. So the cost of -- the cost of that move, you have 36,000 a month. Obviously, it's not to be ignored.

But if we factor in the expectation that the debtor might be able to exit the bankruptcy sooner rather than later. And I am not going to get into a speculation about the details there. That's what's happening, and I guess, and I'm asking the question as I'm looking on the screen here and my poor internet today, that's what Mr. Passarello said.

So that's what it comes down to, right, Mr. Blumberg?

MR. BLUMBERG: That's correct, Your Honor. In our view --

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. BLUMBERG: -- the 36,000 is not insignificant, but it's modest compared with the ability to protect the estate from financial institution failure, the risk, albeit small.

THE COURT: Okay. Does the same document that I've admitted that I haven't studied give us the same kind of analysis, or can you give me the same kind of analysis for the U.S. Bank amount, the hundred million? Or is that (indiscernible). I think Mr. Katz said it's a little more

The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco complicated.

MR. BLUMBERG: Your Honor, this is Jason Blumberg for the United States Trustee. I don't know if with respect to the U.S. Bank account, the debtor broke out the opportunity costs if it were to move to a debtor-in-possession account. What it did do was kind of go through the liquidity issues that would present itself if it were required to liquidate those accounts and the costs associated with that, which I believe the number the debtor indicated was ten million dollars.

But as I understood the supplemental reply, there were actually six out of the fourteen diversified or pooled funds that actually didn't have liquidity constraints. So I don't know if the ten million would be attributable at all to the liquidation of those six accounts.

And then there were four private funds, "private funds", that could be liquidated, as I understood it, on a quarterly basis without penalty.

And then there were four real estate funds that it kind of sounds like it would be exceedingly difficult contractually to liquidate. And I understood the ten million dollars to be associated with that. Sorry, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. But the point is, again, if I pretend that I can solve this thing in a flip of a switch, it means a very much more complicated transaction or series of transactions.

But from your comment, Mr. Blumberg, it sounds to me like your concerns are more focused on the B of A amount and the costs there. And again, I'm not asking to -- this isn't a negotiation position. But you seem like that's a much higher priority in terms of what you and the U.S. Trustee contemplate as the risk to the estate and what you would like to be dealt with more immediately; is that a fair statement?

MR. BLUMBERG: I think that's fair, Your Honor. And also I think the debtor has had a more difficult time meeting its burden to demonstrate cause with respect to that Bank of America account.

THE COURT: Okay. Well, sometimes when I have to pick off these terms like cause, we all know from all of our experience. Maybe the people who are in this bankruptcy for the first time in their entire lives don't know what I'm referring to, but all of you bankruptcy pros know what I'm talking about, is that cause is one of those terms that -- cause is in the mind of the beholder sometimes, and the beholder might be the judge that's making the decision.

Look, what I'm going to do is not something I like to do, but I'm going to, having confessed to you that I simply was -- didn't catch up with the latest filing, I'm going to take time -- my time, not on this hearing. I'm going to review carefully everything that Mr. Passarello said in that supplemental document and the debtor. And I will focus on the

B of A issue much more specifically and take the matter under advisement and try to make a decision very quickly.

And I'm not going to turn this into a learned dissertation. I'll probably issue a three-sentence order. But I'm going to make a decision, and it comes down to motion, the U.S. Trustee objection or U.S. Trustee objection sustained in whole or in part. And I know what the choices are. So I'll let any of the counsel who wish to to make any further comment, but that's my present intention.

So I don't feel it would be carrying out my responsibility or doing justice to either side if I just stopped right now and said, here's my ruling because I don't ignore the submissions by the parties.

So anyone else wish to be -- make a quick closing comment on this subject?

MR. KATZ: Your Honor, this is Ori Katz from Sheppard, Mullin for the debtor. You had ask me to tee up the issue, which I did, but I would like an opportunity to just very briefly respond to Mr. Blumberg's comments and raise a few points.

THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Katz, you don't have to -- you don't have to name your firm or your client and your full title every time you speak up. I know you, and I recognize your voice. But go ahead and --

MR. KATZ: All right.

1 THE COURT: -- please, please make your comments.

mean, and is it met here.

MR. KATZ: Thank you, Your Honor. So I want to start by building on something you mentioned, Your Honor, which is that it can't be that it's strict mandatory compliance every time with 345(b) because otherwise why amend it to include for cause. And so it's really a question of what is for cause

And there's actually not a lot of controversy over the body of case law. Two or three primary cases are cited in both the briefs. And I want to address Ditech in a moment. But the factors are not controversial, and most of the factors that the cases cite are favorable for the debtor here.

There's no dispute this is a big, complicated case.

Nobody disputes a lot of dollars are at issue and that the debtor has a large annual operating budget. It's not disputed that the financial institutions that are involved are highly rated by Standard & Poor's.

And I don't think anyone disputes that there are safeguards in place. There's a professional money manager that's mentioned in the supplemental pastoral declaration. There's an investment committee in place.

A few other factors that I think are relevant. The funds that issue that we're talking about are not critical for operations, and I'm going to come back to that when I discuss Ditech.

And then in terms of harm, there could be real harm obviously to the debtor from early liquidation of locked funds.

And even if you take what is now a balanced pool and you start to liquidate those things that are liquid, leaving behind only those things that are restricted, you've taken a balanced pool that was part of pretty prudent and careful investment planning and you've unbalanced it.

A few other factors, Your Honor. We know reorganization is highly likely. And I'm not going to speak to time table, but we have a track record of religious organization cases that come before this one, and reorganization is the likely outcome. I think one of the most significant factors that isn't mentioned in Service Merchandise but is mentioned in Judge Holt's decision in King Mountain is that no economic stakeholder has opposed the motion, and Judge Holt focused on that quite a bit. He said silence by sophisticated financial stakeholders should be viewed as either support or acquiescence.

And in this case, we have a lot of sophisticated parties. They aren't appearing on this hearing, Your Honor, but the notices of appearance over the last forty-five days tell us we have sophisticated bankruptcy counsel with sophisticated clients that have eyes and ears on the case, but no one filed anything. And other than the committee who did reach out, no other economic stakeholder even picked up the

The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco phone to call me.

And so that the committee is not actively opposing and has offered support is meaningful. And then when you couple that with the nature of the investments, the track record of performance, the fact that a loss isn't going to impact operations, the professional management that's supervised by an investment committee, you start to get a picture of a debtor that's prudently exercising their business judgment, and that's what Judge Holt was talking about in his decision is in larger cases, not wanting to second guess or interfere with that.

And the point of amending 345(b) was to make it clear it's not mandatory. You can't protect against any and every risk. And the legislative history speaks specifically to large cases as being likely for exceptions or more likely for exceptions.

So then I want to turn to Ditech. That's the case out of the Southern District of New York. But that's a really very different case. Yes, it was large and complex, but after that it gets very different. And really, there's two important things I want to point out to Your Honor in looking at Ditech.

Number one, it was clear that the loss of the invested funds there in the Ditech case would have absolutely killed the debtor's operations. They had ninety-five million dollars in a Citibank account that gave them daily liquidity, and it was vital to their operations.

The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco

That's not the case here, Your Honor. Well, we're not a typical business operating in a typical way. But the funds that we're talking about, the investment funds, are not the lifeblood of what this debtor does. We're not generally relying on the liquidity of these funds in our daily operations. The threat to the debtor here is nowhere near what it was to Ditech.

Number two, in Ditech, Citibank, which is the -
THE COURT: I'm going to stop you there. Let me stop you --

MR. KATZ: Yeah.

THE COURT: -- there for a minute, Mr. Katz. Would financial failure of some sort that caused a significant diminution of these funds impact the debtor's ability to compensate the creditors who have driven this debtor into bankruptcy?

MR. KATZ: It could, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yeah. None of whom as I -- none of whom who I believe chose to be creditors the way lenders do, and none of whom are financial institutions, but all of whom are victims of what you know and I know drove this debtor into bankruptcy, along with all the other religious ones that have done it in the last few years.

So can you persuade me that a substantial loss of money wouldn't (audio interference) ability of the debtor to

The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco compensate those claimants?

MR. KATZ: Your Honor, in the event of a substantial loss of money, I mean, that's why I come back to the absence of opposition from financial stakeholders. You have a committee that is the --

THE COURT: Well, I mean, I know. I know. Come on,
Mr. Katz. And if we had a bunch of credit card companies or a bunch of trade creditors who had invested and extended credit at risk, maybe some of them would be speaking out. And I'm not denying the position asserted by the creditors committee, and I appreciate it.

But I think to start comparing this case with something that has a lot of across-the-board activity of financial institutions, this is really a nonstarter from my point of view.

MR. KATZ: Your Honor, the other --

THE COURT: I mean, this is split. To some extent—look, to some extent, this case resembles the PG&E fire cases because as you well know and I know PG&E wouldn't have filed bankruptcy the second time but for the fires. And so there were hundreds of millions of dollars of financial creditors who took an active role in the case but never, never really cared about some of these other issues that drove what ultimately was necessary to deal with the tort claimants.

So you don't have to (indiscernible) my views. I just

telling you that that talking about what happens in a mass tort case like fires or drug cases or a mass tragedy case involving not thousands, but at least hundreds and hundreds of victims who didn't choose to take the risk here is not persuasive.

So I have to think of it in terms of what do I tell them if I make a decision that, for whatever reason, ends up with a substantial hit that the debtor takes because one of its financial decisions turned sour and it impacts the ability of the debtor to compensate the claimants. Okay. So go ahead. With that, I'll shut up and listen to you.

MR. KATZ: Thank you, Your Honor. The other thing I wanted to just point out about Ditech was in that case, Citibank offered to collateralize the account in question, the ninety-five-million-dollar account, in order to bring it into full compliance with U.S. Trustee guidelines. The cost to do that would have been 80,000 dollars a month, which Mr. Blumberg pointed out.

But what is also mentioned in the decision, which I think was impactful for the Court, was that the debtors were earning 2.6 percent per month interest on their Citibank funds, which were fully liquid. That's about 2.5 million dollars. If the debtors had just paid the 80,000-dollar monthly fee, they would have been fully compliant. They wouldn't have had to change their system at all in order to comply, meaning they would have kept their existing cash management system. They

The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco would have just had a slight expense that wasn't even a fraction of the interest they were earning on a monthly basis.

And because that case was a prearranged case, so meaning on day one, the plan was in place and the timeline was going to be very short, the total cost of the estate to bring their existing system into full compliance was going to be about 200 grand against millions of interest. And I think the judge there was probably offended that more than 80,000 dollars had been spent trying to waive compliance when it was right there, readily available.

In contrast, we don't have that here. We don't have the ability to bring existing accounts into compliance for a nominal fee without disturbing the system we've carefully set up. And so I just think Ditech is a very different situation and not necessarily good guidance. That's really it, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. PASCUZZI: I think it's a trade-off of a very minor risk that other courts have accepted as reasonable, given the strength of the financial institutions involved, for near certain interest gain as opposed to taking apart something that was put together over an extended period of time, has a track record of providing benefits that are not going to be insignificant to the estate and that one way or the other aren't going to impact operations, and then running the risk of

The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco significant penalties as well.

THE COURT: Okay. I appreciate your comments, Mr.

Katz.

All right. Unless any of you want to add any further,
I'm going to take the matter under advisement as I explained and for the reason that I explained.

Anything further?

MR. BLUMBERG: Your Honor, this is Jason --

THE COURT: Okay. Yes. Mr. Blumberg.

MR. BLUMBERG: I'm sorry to prolong the hearing, but

11 I --

12 THE COURT: No. Go ahead. I asked you for a comment.

I asked you. Go ahead.

MR. BLUMBERG: Just two quick points. First, on the risk of loss to the estate, I think you directed that question to Mr. Katz, I would like to draw the Court's attention to page 12 of the debtor's supplemental reply, where the debtor talks about the ten-million-dollar cost it estimates associated with liquidating the U.S. Bank accounts.

The debtor states, this is a quote, "A loss of this magnitude will impede significantly and certainly delay the debtor's efforts to reorganize." That's 10 million, not 160 million. So I think the debtors have acknowledged that even a loss of ten million will imperil the debtor's reorganization. And that makes this case more like the situation in Ditech

where the Court found that the loss of the funds would imperil the organization. And it makes the case different from the King Mountain Tobacco case that the debtors cited because the Court very explicitly found that a failure of the financial institutions would likely not be fatal.

The last point is, and I think Mr. Katz was kind of alluding to this, is that these are not accounts that the debtors use in its everyday operations. So moving the accounts to safer harbors, particularly with respect to the Bank of America account, is not going to interrupt the operations. What we're talking about with respect to the Bank of America account is the loss potentially of 36,000 dollars of interest a month, and that has to be balanced against the protection offered to the estate if the institution fails. Thank you, Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: Okay.

MR. LUCAS: Your Honor --

18 THE COURT: And I will thank all of you then.

Well, I mean, I really don't want to go back over this again. So the last person who wanted to speak, did you have something brand new to add or just to repeat what you were saying?

MR. LUCAS: Your Honor, this is John Lucas. I was the one that was speaking up and wanting to say something in response to what Mr. Blumberg just said. I understand --

1 THE COURT: Okay.

MR. LUCAS: -- Mr. Blumberg's point about even the loss of ten million dollars is something that could impede the debtor's reorganization. But the debtor shouldn't be forced to do something over a requirement in the Bankruptcy Code that is remedied by cause could necessarily cause the debtor to lose ten million dollars if it's required to liquidate these funds because I think that's what the debtor's saying here is that with respect to the U.S. Bank investments, there will be a loss of ten million dollars, which can be avoided here, and everything else is speculation.

And so to the extent that the debtor is required to do this, it should be done in some way that ameliorates that. And shouldn't be something that has to be done overnight so that the debtor can address these potential losses in some way that isn't going to cause these losses because I think what the debtor's view here is that there will be a loss of ten million. And as the United States Trustee is trying to, I think, sort of seize on here is that even that would be harmful. So I don't know why the UST would want something that would cause immediate harm.

MR. BLUMBERG: Your Honor --

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. BLUMBERG: Jason Blumberg. Can I just respond

25 briefly? As I understood it --

- 1 THE COURT: Well, no.
- 2 MR. BLUMBERG: I'm sorry, Your Honor.

3 THE COURT: Look, I think I got it. This isn't the 4 first time I've dealt with this kind of issue. I just have to 5 get up with the facts.

So no, Mr. Blumberg. I don't want to be rude. I just, I can't keep up with this back-and-forth if I don't go back and read the documents carefully. And it might take another little longer than I might have, but I'm going to do it -- I'm going to do it my way.

So what I promise you is in relatively quick time, within days, I promise, I will issue a decision. And I won't be able to take the time, and I don't intend to take the time, to get into some lengthy explanation. So I will take Mr.

Katz's advice and Mr. Blumberg's and I'll take a look at the Ditech case and the other cases that he was referring to. And I'll reread and -- not reread, read for the first time the declaration that I admitted that I hadn't caught up with. And I'll issue a decision on it.

And so I thank you for your time and more importantly, your careful presentation, and the matter stands submitted.

So Mr. Pascuzzi, back to you for the debtor generally.

There's no other business to conduct today; am I correct?

MR. PASCUZZI: I don't think so, Your Honor. We've got November 9th, I think, is our next hearing date with the

The Roman Catholic Archbishop Of San Francisco claims procedures motion. So we'll see you then again. THE COURT: Okay. Okay. Thank you all for your time. I will conclude the hearing. (Whereupon these proceedings were concluded at 2:15 PM)
